ROAD SYSTEM IS MEASURE PLANNED IN FAMINE AREA

Tax Increase Will Be Levied Only For Six Months

BUREAU FORMED

Work Of Giving Relief Being Co-ordinated At Peking

REPORT RECEIVED

Conditions In Stricken District Described By Observer

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, October 6.—It is officially announced that the Government intends to utilise famine labor for the construction of roads from Peitaiho to Peking, from Kaifengfu to Tsinanfu, from Tsinanfu to Tientsin and from Chefoo to Weihsien under the direction of the gentry, not of officials.

It is pointed out that the proposed Salt and Customs surtaxes would only be levied for six months.

A special bureau is being established to co-ordinate the work of the various famine relief organisations. It is understood that Admiral Tsai Ting-kan will be appointed Treasurer of the famine funds.

This is expected largely to relieve popular anxiety with regard to the disbursement of the funds, the Admiral being equally trusted by both Chinese and foreign circles.

DESPERATE CONDITIONS DESCRIBED BY OBSERVER

(China Press Correspondence)

Juchow, Oct. 1.—The famine conditions prevailing in the north of China extend way down to this place. Having harvested about half a crop in the spring the situation looked quite bright in July. But August put its doom on the fall crop. Coming back from Kikungshan the first part of September we met groups of poor people trying to save their lives by moving to more fortunate places. Droves of cattle were also driven towards the railroad to be sold for a fourth or so what they were worth. So many were butchered inland that about two catties of meat could be bought for the same price as one catty of bread. But this feast on meat could not last long. It was only to get rid of the eaters of straw before they died from starvation.

The market was glutted with house furniture or things that had any value with the consequence that buyers were few if, any and otherwise valuable things could be bought for a pittance.

CHILD POISONED

The poor resort to desperate measures. One family south of the city, seeing no hope of taking their child of a few years along put poison in a little food, left it with the child and masoned up the door with sun dried brick. At another place a number of poor had been sleeping on a threshing floor outside of a village. In the early morning the parents got up and walked off leaving seven or eight children there sleeping. When these woke up and did not find their parents there was a tremendous wailing, that caused the villagers to take pity on them. There need be no stretch of imagination to see that this could not be repeated very often before children suffer the same fate as the over supply of tables and chairs on the market.

Then there is the old trouble with robbers. There seem to be any number of them. At one village there was a movement on foot to defend themselves against bandits. Four or five men advertised that they were capable of instructing the villagers how to make their bodies immune to all kinds of weapons. Some forty or fifty applied for enrollment in their school. After taking instruction for a month they were graduated and a test was held. Five of the graduates were placed at a certain place and a volley was fired at them with the result that four died and the fifth was badly wounded. When

Three Steamers Of China Mail Alter Schedule

Announcement was issued yesterday from the Shanghai office of the China Mail Steamship Company that beginning in December the company's two steamers Nile and China will call at Singapore regularly and beginning at the same time the steamer Nanking will make Manila a port of call.

The three vessels named have been running between San Francisco and Hongkong by way of Honolulu, Japan ports and Shanghai and the lengthening of the run may presage some addition to the China Mail fleet in line with enlarged passenger and freight service to the Orient soon to be provided by other steamship lines. Details of the new schedule of the China Mail have not yet been given out.

Thousands Of Prisoners, Many Guns Captured As Reds Flee

Dr. Tenney Confident In People's Triumph; Guest At University Club Tiffin

Veteran Statesman Expresses Satisfaction With Progress Made By Intelligent Class In China And Predicts Downfall Of Military Men

Expressing his great confidence in the ultimate triumph of the Chinese people, Dr. Charles D. Tenney, retiring United States Charge D'Affaires at Peking, yesterday gave an interesting talk at the tiffin of the American University Club, given in his honor at the Carlton.

Dr. Tenney believed that the military cliques would be overthrown in a short time and the salvation of the nation rests with the intelligent class, which he said, is today making wonderful progress in this country.

DR. WU PRESIDES

Dr. Wu Ting-fang, the veteran statesman, acted as toastmaster being introduced by Mr. Tang Shao-yi, president of the club, as "The youngest member of our club."

Dr. C. T. Wang, China's peace delegate at Versailles, paid a glowing tribute to the retiring American statesman as an educator.

Dr. Wu expressed his joy in presiding over a function in honor of a very old friend of his. He served with Dr. Tenney thirty years ago under the same leader and statesman, Li Hung-chang, in whose yamen, Dr. Tenney attended daily to teach the sons and grandsons of the Li family.

It was then an innovation, Dr. Wu said, to see a foreigner openly go to the yamen of a high official and teach English, but Li was influential enough to offset the curiosity, if not antagonism.

In a humorous vain, Dr. Wu asked Dr. Tenney to return to China. He said he was surprised to see Dr. Tenney retire at such a young age, since he was but a young man when compared with his own age; and strongly advised Dr. Tenney to return to enjoy his leisure in China where people would welcome him with open hands.

THE BLACK SHEEP

Dr. Wu spoke feelingly when he referred to the work of Dr. Tenney at the Peiyang University in Tientsin. Dr. Tenney was the pillar-stone of the institution, he said, and he was the mere figure head, the director. The institution had produced a number of able men. One of two of these, however, Dr. Wu said, have turned deadly against him. They deserve death—morally not physically. But he was glad to be able to call upon one who had distinguished himself in the service of his country. He then called on Dr. Wang.

Dr. Wang pointed out that while the brilliant record of Dr. Tenney as a diplomat in Peking, was within the knowledge of most people few, he ventured, know very much about his educational career. He wished to show some of the strong factors which Dr. Tenney had succeeded in bringing into play.

Thirty years ago, conditions were different and the introduction of modern education was regarded as suspicious if not dangerous. But there were four things Dr. Tenney had done. Dr. Wang said, which in his mind, were most significant and lasting.

WAS PIONEER

First, Dr. Tenney was a pioneer in modern education. The old system of culture and classics did not bring into consideration the welfare of the people. Dr. Tenney succeeded in introducing the modern system. He was one of the first to found an institution for such work. Dr. Tenney was not satisfied with merely transplanting what was being employed by American schools.

In this connection, Dr. Wang made some terse comments on the old missionary educational policy. He said that the missionary educational policy was, until recently, insufficient, because it merely carried out what was being done in America.

URGED INDUSTRY

Second, Dr. Tenney emphasised the industrial development of China and the people's economic needs. Before Dr. Tenney's efforts, it was the dream of every youth in China to get into official life. But if every youth gets into official life of a nation, Dr. Wang asserted, it will be most in injurious to the nation as well as the youth. The new system was to direct the educational minds into something other than official life, such as industrial development or commercial enterprises. The speaker then enumerated a number of industrial magnates who were once Peiyang students.

Third, Dr. Tenney introduced physical culture and athletics at a time when such developments were considered most disgraceful. He introduced military drill, because of which he was impeached by his high officials.

Lastly, Dr. Wang said, Dr. Tenney emphasised the importance of

St. Ignatius College Will Observe 70th Anniversary

St. Ignatius College at Siccawei this year has attained its 70th year of existence. Its former pupils will be glad to learn that their Alma Mater is preparing to celebrate its 70th anniversary and that this celebration will take place about the middle of November.

In so many years, the Alumni have scattered all over China and up to the present, it has been impossible to permanently group them together.

The College intends profiting by the coming celebration to establish an Alumni Association. In order to be able to get a complete list of the former students, they are all asked kindly to send in in writing the name they had as students, their present address, the number and approximate dates of the years spent at the College, and their actual profession. In return for this information, they will be forwarded a more complete account of the plans for the proposed Association and a detailed program of the same.

The reunion will afford the Alumni an opportunity, which they will gladly seize, to behold the new additions made to the College which began 70 years ago in very humble quarters. Although it has undergone many alterations, its aim has never changed, from the day when in 1850, during the great famine following upon a terrible flood so disastrous for the environs of Shanghai, it threw open its doors to gather in a few miserable boys and distribute to them nourishment for mind and heart as well as for the body, up to this year 1920 when it harbors and educates 450 Chinese Youths, regardless of religion, tongue or province.

NON-SOCIALISTS AT VLADIVOSTOK ARE TO STAND BY COALITION

Communists Arraigned As Tricksters Who Are Misleading People

SEEK TO SAVE STATE

Minority Explains Why It Stays With Faction To Which It Objects

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Vladivostock, October 5.—The members of the parties forming the non-Socialist bloc held a meeting today, when they decided to stand by the Coalition. The following statement of their position was afterwards issued:

"The non-Socialists entered the Coalition because they considered their participation essential in order to join up with the other Governments and retain Far-Eastern Russia. The Communists, taking advantage of the non-Socialists' decision to work amicably, commenced agitating against the Right wing in the Assembly.

BRIBERY CHARGED

"Following upon the first agreement with Verdhne-Udinsk, the Communists tried to delay the report, so as to enable them to talk over the peasants, and influence them with bribes and lies, to the effect that Japan recognised Verdhene-Udinsk.

"The non-Socialists declare that they are not responsible for the action of Communist Ministers, who continued their agitation, making capital out of M. Krasnoshchekoff's threat against Chita and the statement of M. Shatoff (the Verdhne-Udinsk representative at Vladivostok) regarding successful negotiations with the Japanese.

"The non-Socialists are convinced that the Communists are working under the direction of Moscow, and that, no matter what agreement may be arrived at, it is always liable to be broken on orders from Russia. It was on this account that some of the Socialist groups stated that they might withdraw their support from the Cabinet in view of the Communists' unreliability. The Communists, fearing their intrigues were discovered, beat a retreat, called off the workmen's strike, and withdraw their opposition to the non-Socialists' attitude on the question of M. Yourin's mission.

AGENTS OF SOVIET

"The Communists here are agents of the Soviet Government in Europe. They are energetic and unprincipled, changing their front to suit the occasion.

"The non-Socialists are certain that the Communists have negotiated with Japan regarding Saghalien and Kamchatka, and also that the Socialist groups are being misled, and will only wake up when the Communists start to imprison them. The Bolsheviks have secured the election of the peasants to the Assembly, in order that they may pass mechanically the decisions worked out by the Socialist bloc.

"The non-Socialist minority has, nevertheless, decided to continue the Coalition and make a last effort to form a democratic State in the Far East in the interest of Russia."

Mayer Tells Premier Of France Conditions Will Be Carried Out

(Reuter's Service)

London, October 3.—On the occasion of his paying his first official visit to M. Leygues (the Premier), Dr. Mayer, the German Ambassador emphasised that it was Germany's intention to carry out the Treaty of Versailles to the extreme limit of her possibilities.

M. Leygues, speaking in reply, declared that the French Government, if convinced of Germany's good faith, would do her utmost to facilitate Germany's task, and thus the resumption of economic relations between the two countries would be greatly facilitated.

The interview was characterised by sincerity on both sides, and appears to be a good augury for the future.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA

Paris, October 5.—Further evidence of Pan-Germanist machinations has come to light.

The authorities in Saxony recently discovered in an attache case mislaid by a well-known Pan-Germanist leader, documents detailing plans for a great coup d'etat in Germany to be effected in December by a so-called "Red Army."

The document was of course a pure fabrication being intended according to traditional German methods, to terrify and demoralise the public.

CONVENTION OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS IS BURNED OUT

Hall Built At Tokio For World Meeting Is Destroyed

THEATER IS USED

Sessions Go On In Spite Of Great Conflagration

IMAGE UNHARMED

Likeness Of Christ Escapes Damage From Flames

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, October 5.—The Convention Hall, specially built for the World Sunday-School Convention, in which a fire broke out this afternoon, has become a total loss.

The cause of the outbreak is not definitely known, but it is believed to have been due to a short-circuit in the electric wiring, seeing that it started when the lights were turned on in an illuminated dome, in the center of the building, which bore the inscription: "I am the light of the world."

The building though of handsome design, was of light lath and plaster construction, and burned like tinder. It cost about 150,000 yen.

CROWD IN HALL

There were 800 people in the hall, including 600 choristers, when the fire started, in the domed ceiling, too high to be accessible. The gathering dispersed in good order, but there was a tremendous amount of excitement.

It has been ascertained that no one was killed, though at first it was thought that some had been caught in the galleries before they were able to escape. A few people, however, sustained minor injuries.

The scene from outside was most dramatic. A tremendous pillar of black smoke hung over the center of Tokio, and huge flames were seen shooting above the buildings on the sky-line.

Then the smoke and flames disappeared with startling suddenness.

The great square in front of the Central Station, which is near the hall, was packed with spectators, who were driven back by police and mounted gendarmes.

Viscount Shibusawa, the head of the committee which built the hall, arrived in an automobile as the flames were dwindling.

IMAGE UNHARMED

Had the fire broken out a few hours later an awful holocaust would have resulted. The building was insured for 140,000 yen. The records and exhibits of the Convention have been entirely lost. Count Uchida has expressed his condolences to the Convention.

The Executive has energetically coped with the situation, and the sessions will be held as planned. The meeting arranged for tonight was held, with a modified program, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, with an overflow meeting in the Salvation Army Hall.

There is a difficulty arising from the smallness of the available halls, and an emergency committee of prominent Japanese is endeavoring to secure the Imperial Theater or the Diet buildings for further sessions.

Dr. Frank Brown, of Brooklyn, the secretary of the World's Association, in an address will urge that the Convention should move to secure full recognition of race equality.

THEATER SECURED

Tokio, October 6.—Last night's meeting in connection with the Sunday School Convention cheered the announcement by Viscount Shibusawa that he had secured the use of the Imperial Theater for the Convention meetings from the 7th instant.

The theater is a most fitting place for staging pageants, and there are dining and committee-rooms available.

The ready response of the Japanese people and authorities is most deeply appreciated by the Sunday-school workers.

national service among the youths. The speaker could not forget the vivid words Dr. Tenney used in guiding his pupils to serve one's nation and he said that he could bear witness to the great good done to Peiyang students by this great educationalist and friend of the Chinese people.

GIVEN OVATION

Dr. Tenney was given an ovation when he rose to speak in response to Dr. Wu Ting-fang.

"In order to know each other, we must know each other's ideals," he said in part. "Unfortunately, we judge too much by what we see, and vices are often nearer the surface than virtues." Dr. Tenney then cited several examples of misunderstanding drawn from his own experience.

"I have noted two encouraging things that are helping to bring together the two civilisation," he went on. "The first is that while some years ago the Chinese met only foreign sailors or petty merchants, they are now coming in touch with people of broader vision and philanthropic purpose. Foreigners must recognise that the Chinese are idealist and that many of them live up to their ideals with surprising fidelity.

MISSIONARIES CHANGING

"The second hopeful feature is the complete change in the attitude of the missionary body. When I first came to China, the missionaries were engaged entirely in the teaching of Christian doctrine. Now they are chaging their emphasis from doctrine to philanthropic and educational work, which is as it should be. They are becoming more interested in interpreting Western ideals than in teaching theology.

"On the Chinese side, the most striking change, has been in the educational system. The fact that so many Chinese have gone to America to study is bound to produce a better understanding between the two countries. Social relations between the educated classes of the two nations should be encouraged as far as possible.

PEOPLE ARE HOPES

"At the present time, many of China's friends are discouraged over the condition of the government. No doubt the condition is critical but we should guard against speaking of the government of China as if it were synonymous with the people. There is no need to be discouraged with the Chinese people.

"China is changing very rapidly. When I first came to Peking, the dust was a foot deep on the streets and there were no vehicles except Peking carts. Now many of the streets are well paved and there are one thousand automobiles in the city.

"In conclusion I wish to emphasise that I have the utmost confidence in the ultimate triumph of the Chinese people and that, when the militarists are overthrown, they will have a chance to prove themselves. Those engaged in educational lines here should feel that they are working for the salvation of a great country."

Among those present at the tiffin were Mr. T. R. Jernigan, Major A. Bassett, Mr. Y. C. Tong, Major C. P. Holcomb, Mr. William Lockwood, Mr. George A. Fitch, Mr. H. H. Kung, Mr. M. Y. Chung, Mr. M. F. Perkins, Mr. William Chapman, Mr. J. B. Powell, The Rev. E. C. Lobenstine, Mr. Lawrence K. Kentwell and Mr. Don D. Patterson.

GRAIN NEEDED

How all the farmers are going to get their fields planted with grain this fall is a mystery. The poor will have a desperate struggle. It has been said that of the high lands only about thirty or fourty percent will be planted. It is reported that in two or three months corpses from starved people may be seen.

The city magistrate is now investigating this territory to find out the real situation in this city. There will be no doubt be put forth an effort on the part of the well to do to help the poor, but such relief will not go far.

Court Of Nation Is To Decide On League When Vote Is Cast Says Wilson

President Makes His First Direct Appeal To People Of United States In Present Campai n

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Washington, October 5.—President Wilson has issued his first appeal directly to the people in the present electoral campaign.

He urges that the League of Nations stands in danger at the elections, and declares that "the whole world will wait the Court verdict in November."

He characterises as "absolutely false" the assertions that Article 10 of the League Covenant would make it possible for other nations to lead the United States into war.

He affirms that there is nothing in the Covenant "which in the least interferes with or opposes the right of Congress to declare or undeclare war on its own independent judgment, as the constitution provides."

BORAH MAKES ATTACK

The communication, which is addressed to "My fellow-countrymen," continues to make no mention of the Presidential candidates by name.

Danbury, Connecticut, October 5.—Senator Borah, in opening a four-day speaking campaign on behalf of Senator Brandegee, declared himself an irreconcilable opponent to America's entering the association of nations which Senator Harding proposed as a substitute for the League of Nations.

He said: "All these schemes lead to Europe, whether with or without reservations.

"Whether it is called a league, a concert of the Powers, an alliance or an association, it joins you and your children's children to their wars and eternal diplomatic intrigue."

SHANTUNG QUESTION

He asked them to witness some of the scenes at Versailles, such as the betrayal of China—a deal by which Shantung was bartered to an unfriendly Power, while the American representatives sat silent. Senator Borah declared this was the first time that the United States has connived at the betrayal of a friendly people, and broken every pledge, legal and moral, which a people could make.

Washington, October 5.—President Wilson has written to Senator Spencer, declaring that the recent statement made by the latter, to the effect that the President promised American military aid to Rumania and Servia, and an invasion of those countries, was false.

BANDITS IN RAID ON HUNGCHUN

Japanese Consulate Scene Of Attack By Band Of Outlaws

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, October 5.—Telegrams from Hungchun report that bandits looted the city twice, including the Japanese Consulate, but apparently none of the consular staff were injured. The Customs House has hitherto remained unmolested.

The townspeople suffered enormously. They are totally unable to defend themselves against the numerous armed outlaws who infest the hinterland, and swoop down on Hungchun and the neighboring villages, carrying off their booty to their homes in the mountains and forests. These are the regular winter quarters of thousands of Hunghutsze, who operate in the Fengtien and Kirin plains during the summer months.

The withdrawal of troops from the neighborhood of Hungchun is stated to be the cause of the sudden activity of these bandits in that district, and the populace are asking the Japanese to send military assistance from Novokievek (midway between Hungchun and Possiet Bay) as appeals to Mukden have so far proved unavailing.

BIG BAND OF RAIDERS

Tokio, October 5.—According to a semi-official report, the raiders who burned, looted and murdered at Hungchun numbered 400, and included 100 Koreans and a few Russians.

Reports indicate that Korean malcontents have allied themselves with the Hunghutsze.

It is pointed out that if the Koreans become "Bolshevised" a far more serious situation will then ensue, and fears are entertained as to further outrages at towns on the Korean border.

The Japanese authorities are, however, prepared for emergencies.

Famine, Brigandage And Soldiery Are Playing Havoc In South Chihli

Yenshan, Chihli, September 29.—A situation exists at the present moment in the South of this City that calls for immediate action on the part of the provincial military authorities.

To the horrors of famine due to a complete failure of both harvests this year over more than half the country, the absence of adequate police protection with its inevitable concomitant—insecurity of life and property—is now added ruthless plunder and barbarity on the part of the defeated and disgruntled force of Lung Chi-kuang, which, after being driven from his camp at Hsiaotsan, south of Tientsin, in July, has now quartered itself upon the unhappy people in this region.

EXPLOITS OF SOLDIERY

Needless to say, they left behind them a trail of suffering, and a tale of woe in the villages en route.

The force was recruited by Lung Chi-kuang in Yunnan in the early days of the Republic, and had seen "active service" in several provinces before coming north. The numerical strength of the rabble that fled south in July has been estimated at between two and three thousand under the command of an officer named Huang.

The number of officers is greatly in excess of that required by such a small force, and in the circumstances it is not surprising to find that there is not the semblance of discipline among the men.

After a foraging raid from this city to the east in the direction of the Kaowan, (a market center in the midst of an utterly famine stricken region near the Shantung Haifeng) border, the hungry horde turned south-west, and decided to occupy the villages about Wangshu, half-way between Yenshan and Chingyun.

Their stay here was brief, hardly a fortnight, and to the intense relief of their unwilling hosts they moved their headquarters to Meng-chia-tien a market town some twenty li to the west.

LEVY FOR SOLDIERS

As a precaution against possible contingencies the Magistrate of Ch'ing-yun-hsien has imposed a forced levy upon the people of his district, each village having been asked to contribute a certain amount of grain and hard cash, to propitiate the uniformed robbers.

One village had sent in forty catties of grain and twenty dollars.

Though this tax appears small, the total gathered from the five hundred odd villages of the city represents a considerable amount in these hard times, but the people would far rather pay this from their meagre resources than be exposed to periodical raids from the remorseless soldiers.

Lung Chi-kuang is now in Peking, doing his best to extract pay for his hapless command, but so far nothing has come to hand.

Other and huge bills are awaiting payment, presented by the victorious Tuchuns Tsao Kun and Chang Tso-lin, after their comic opera campaign of the summer, and no-one has any time to consider the comparatively insignificant claims of the people for relief, not from famine primarily, but from what intensifies famine, the ravages of hungry and vagabond soldiery, who should long ago have been relieved of their arms, disbanded, and sent back to their homes.

CITY IS CRUELLY HIT

Yenshan is easily the poorest and most cruelly hit famine-district of those visited during the past week, and yet here; bands of soldiers are plundering villages at will, exasperated no doubt in some measure by the indifference of the authorities to their existence, and regardless of their fate during the coming winter. It is a scandalous state of affairs that calls for the utmost and widest publicity, in the hope of speedy relief.

There is no kaoliang harvest in this region, and miserable stunted Indian corn stalks with their shrivelled cobs will yield a problematical one-tenth of the normal crop to their depressed owners. Groups of soldiers in twos and threes were seen wandering lazily through the fields all over the country-side. In each village round Meng-chia-tien some hundreds of these braves were quartered, most of the inhabitants having been required to vacate their own homes, and huddle together in families.

The best houses, of course, have been commandeered by the troops, and the villagers have to make the best of an intolerable situation.

Outside Ta-Chao-chia information was supplied by a dispirited farmer to the effect that in the absence of an adequate supply of fuel for the troops billeted there, the villagers had to stand by helplessly, and see some of their homes torn down and the beams, doors and window frames consigned to flames by their pitiless guests. Trees, even fruit-bearing date trees, particularly productive this year, have been stripped of their branches to serve the same purpose.

WOMEN FOLK NOT SAFE

Worse still the women-folk are exposed daily to the brutal attentions of the troops and no family is safe.

In Meng-chia-tien a similar state of affairs exists though most of the information was gathered from isolated people along roadside. The idle soldiers filled every inn in the place, and probably owing to their suspicious of inquisitive strangers we were refused even the modest pot of tea procurable everywhere by thirsty travelers.

Practically all the offices of the forces are to be found in the wealthy families, the soldiers quartered in the neighoring villages being left to their own devices, a plan no doubt satisfactory to both grades. Foraging parties of men go out daily to commandeer supplies from villages beyond the area occupied. If these are not forthcoming, a threat to send troops to billet themselves on the people immediately has the desired effect. Heavy taxation is always preferable to spoliation, and they submit.

After skirting headquarters for obvious reasons in a chance conversation we learnt details of a ghastly crime committed by some soldiers five days ago in the village of Liu Wa-tsai where two or three hundred are in occupation.

GHASTLY CRIMES OF TROOPS

It appears that a few blackguards intent upon raping the womenfolk of a Mohammedan family named Han, had endeavored to force an entrance at the front door, where they had, however, been held at bay by two young fellows belonging to the family.

Frustrated in their designs, the soldiers retired to plot vengeance, which they achieved the same night in a particularly heartless fashion. Professing to be acting under the orders of a superior officer, a few comrades demanded that these two young men should go to a village nearby, and obtain some medicine for the said officer's imaginery complaint. The poor fellows were thus lured to their destruction, though they must have had suspicious of the clumsy subterfuge. The soldiers were waiting in ambush outside the village, and brutally murdered them both in a wizened and stunted cornfield, where we saw the fresh mounds of earth that marked their graves.

MAGISTRATE POWERLESS

The way was now clear for the carrying out of the murderers' original intentions, which were accomplished without delay. The womenfolk appealed in vain to the Yenshan magistrate who conducted the inquest.

The official is naturally powerless to secure the punishment of the murderers. Doubtless he entered the village in considerable trepidation and was glad to get away unharmed from the unavoidable performance of his duties. His report of the murder is probably by this time pigeon-holed at some Yamen in Tientsin.

Only three nights ago troops to the number of two or three hundred, occupying the villages of Mengchia and Chiangchia, broke away from their quarters at a preliminary signal, and set out on a series of raids, beginning with the walled village of Yangtsun, 20 li to the west, and near the market center of Hsunhsien.

RAIDS FREQUENT

A large number of villages in this region was encircled by thick mud walls or weitze, 20ft. in height, which are manned every night by the able-bodied men of the place, against attack by wandering parties of armed marauders. Yangtsun is particularly well-protected, the wall being unusually high and strong; indeed some of the well-to-do farmers in the region are known to have stored their valuables with friends there, relying upon the greater security of the defenses, information which was presumably presented to the raiders by local scallywags, eager for a share in the loot.

At dawn on the following day they approached Yangtsun from the west, and thus threw the defenders off their guard, for trouble was not expected from that quarter. As they neared the gate, in response to the challenge as to who and what they were, an officer replied that they were Government troops sent down from the north to protect the people.

They were on the march eastwards and politely asked for some refreshment from the village, before proceeding on their journey.

The story seemed plausible and the gate was opened by the unsuspecting guards, after consultation with the village elders. Tea was offered the tired soldiers, and all cooking pots in the place were soon busy, preparing a meal.

PLACE SWEPT CLEAN

There was little or no wheat in the barns and bins at a time of famine, so they served up what they were themselves existing upon, coarse red kaoliang imported from more fortunate districts—flavored with weeds and herbs gathered from the barren country-side. This unappetising fare was roughly refused by the hungry troops, who, at a given signal, broke loose, and for the best part of the morning ransacked the village.

No house was spared, every box and cupboard was broken into, and all decent wadded clothing and valuables taken, until they had swept the place clean.

To add insult to injury, they forced a number of villagers to accompany them and carry the loot. One poor fellow, who was rash enough to protest against the rifling of his home, was shot dead on the spot, and another was dangerously wounded.

This village of Yantsun is across the Yenshan border, and under the jurisdiction of the Tsangchow Magistrate. That official was expected to arrive on the scene to conduct an inquest on the murdered men, and investigate the whole tragedy.

Like his Yenshan confrere, in the case mentioned above, he is equally powerless to exert his authority and bring the rascals to book, unsupported as he is by any reliable and efficient body of trained men.

SUBSEQUENT EXPLOITS

Since arrival in this city information has reached me of the subsequent exploits of this band of roving soldiers. After an unsuccessful attempt to break into a strongly fortified village to the north of Hsunhsien, they turned east and have looted the villages of Nansunchia, Machiafeng, and Tsapeng, all in Yenshanhsien.

The latest report to hand is that they have reached the market center of Tsuichiakou, near the Shantung border.

Unless prompt measures are taken by the high military authorities to restrain their activities, and to disarm the whole force, including their comrades in the vicinity of Mengchiatien the present reign of terror throughout the region which is also affecting neighboring hsiens will lead to a state of anarchy over a wide area among people stung to desperation by the pangs of hunger.

BANDITS UNCHECKED

In three centers only was there any successful attempt to cope with the utter lawlessness abroad, and it is pleasing to record that at Kaowan, Yangchiachi, and Hsunhsien, the courageous work of small police contingents of ex-soldiers was damping the enthusiasm of the bandits.

The resourcefulness and praiseworthy devotion to duty of these representatives of law and order show what might be done by a few efficient leaders, with loyal, trust-worthy men, and are a grateful contrast to the prevailing indifference of the high authorities and their minions to the sufferings of the people here in this corner of Chihli.

PREDATORY SOLDIERS

It is useless to talk of relieving the appalling distress of this hsien, which must be relieved in the coming months, or tens of thousands will die of starvation, until the authorities have been roused by public opinion to take immediate action against brigandage and predatory soldiers whose pay is months in arrears, and who have no prospect of winter clothing from official sources.

The prices of cereals in this famine-stricken region are rising to unprecedented heights, owing to the insecurity of roads and transport. The risks are far too great for the cartage of supplies from the large centers, except under military escort, and in consequence wealthy and unscrupulous profiteers are exploiting the miseries of the people.

As this condition of affairs obtains in greater or less degree all over the stricken north, the strongest appeal should be made by Famine Relief Committees now in session to press home upon the Tuchuns concerned the impossibility of rendering adequate help in the existing preposterous circumstances, and of the absolute necessity for drastic measures before it is too late.—*P. and T. RUSSIA SEEKING TO AVOID DEBTS CLAIM OF TIMES

Proposed Trade Agreement Is Denounced In London As An Evasion

(Reuter's Service)

London, Oct. 5.—The draft of the Anglo-Russian trade agreement was published today and confirms the forecasts already published. It ignores the question of the vast liabilities of the Russian Government, municipalities and private borrowers and proposes protection against the attachment of Russian gold securities and commodities, which Russia may export in the course of trading.

The Times denounces the agreement as a contract of repudiation of Russia's obligations and declares that every member of the Stock Exchange, the Baltic Exchange and Lloyd's knows that repudiation of contract means instant expulsion and disgrace.

The Times states, however, that the Cabinet is reported to have postponed consideration of the agreement because the reports of the disintegration of the Soviet forces are growing steadily more persistent.

Furthermore trade negotiations will not be resumed until the Government has received satisfactory assurances from the Soviet with regard to the return of British prisoners, Bolshevik propaganda and hostile action in Asia.

Give Dominion To Ireland, Asquith's Advice To Britain

New York, Oct. 6.—According to an Associated Press message from London, Mr. Asquith, in a letter to the Times has declared himself convinced that the only solution of the Irish problem is in the bestowal of the status of an autonomous dominion in the fullest and widest sense on Ireland. He adds the fiscal independence is a requisite factor.

Y.W.C.A. LEADER TELLS OF TOUR

Mrs. Robert C. Beebe invited to her home at 207 North Szechuen Road yesterday afternoon about seventy-five of the Chinese and foreign ladies of Shanghai to hear a presentation of the work of the Young Women's Christian Association by Miss Grace Coppock, general secretary of the Y.W.C.A. National Committee for China, who has just returned from a tour of the world.

Miss Coppock went abroad primarily to attend the National Convention of the American Y.W.C.A. held in Cleveland last April, and the first conference of the World's Y.W.C.A. since the war, which met at Champery, Switzerland, in June. It was possible, however, to combine with this trip attendance at the conference of the British Y.W.C.A. in Yorkshire, England, and a trip across India with Miss Faith Parmalee, general secretary of the national Y.W.C.A. of India.

TELLS OF TRIP

Miss Coppock spoke to Mrs. Beebe's guests on her impressions of the international situation among women. It is significant that in her contacts with Chinese women leaders, as she travels this year among the city Y.W.C.A.'s of China, Miss Coppock will be able to relate the Christian woman movement of China even more vitally to that of these other countries. She leaves for a visit to the Peking Association today.

Preceding Miss Coppock's talk Miss Grace Yang, a member of the national staff of the Y.W.C.A., spoke on the substantial development of the Association here in Shanghai, referring to the Shanghai Association as the oldest member of the Association family in China. There are six other established city branches, four preparing to organise, and eighty-two student branches.

CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS

Announcement was made of the Association's plan for a finance campaign for the securing of funds for the work of 1920-21, to be held October 20-November 6. The amount needed is $13,000, which will be applied to both the local and national work.

Changsha, Oct. 1.—The offices of the Asiatic Petroleum Company were completely destroyed by fire on the evening of September 30. The fire which originated shortly before 10 o'clock in some Chinese buildings to the north, was a spectacular one, wiping out over 200 feet of buildings fronting on the bund and also destroying property to the east across the narrow River Street. Prompt action resulted in the safe removal of most of the office furniture and records, and also the furnishings of the top floor which was used for residential purposes.

"Began to think she would never get well."

Our Portrait is of Miss FLORRIE ORGAN, of 100, Clark Street, Ladywood, Birmingham, England, whose father writes:

"My daughter Florrie was suffering with a very bad head covered with Sores and Eruptions, and in fact her mother was afraid to comb her hair. She had been under several doctors, but all to no purpose, so I began to think she would never get well again and lose all her hair. As your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' cured me of Glandular Swellings in the Neck some years ago, and so averted my having to undergo an operation, I decided to give 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' a fair trial in the case of my daughter, and I am pleased to say it effected a wonderful cure in just over a fortnight."

SUFFERERS from Bad Legs, Abscesses, Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Piles, Eczema, Boils, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Eruptions, Rheumatism, Gout, should realise that lotions and ointments can but give temporary relief; to be sure of complete and lasting benefit the blood must be thoroughly cleansed of the impure waste matter the root cause of such troubles. Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly attacks, overcomes and expels the impurities; that is why so many remarkable recoveries stand to its credit. Pleasant to take, and free from injurious ingredients.

"PLUCKY" POTT DEFEATS ROBERTS IN THRILLING BATTLE ON THE COURTS

Wrenches Injured Knee, But Gamely Continues Semi-Final Match And Wins—"Finest Tennis Contest Of Season," Is Spectators' Unanimous Verdict

By Dudley Burrows

In what was undoubtedly the fastest and finest match of tennis played in Shanghai or its environs during the season just ending, on the "corner court" at the French Club yesterday afternoon, Mr. W. S. A. Pott vanquished Mr. W. P. Roberts in the semi-final round of the 1920 singles championship, S.L.T.A., winning by the scores of 5-7, 6-4, 6-3.

By virtue of this triumph over his fellow St. John's man Mr. Pott earned the right to meet Mr. J. Tanaka, two-time holder of the Shanghai singles title, in the championship round of the tournament, to be played on Saturday next at the Shanghai Country Club.

For pure, pluck, perseverance and tennis prowers I would heartily recommend this same "Bill" Pott. Yesterday, with the game score standing at five-all in the first set, "Bill," while tearing netward in pursuit of one of Roberts' teasing "horse-shoe letts," stumbled and badly wrenched his left knee, which he has had under treatment all summer.

With a sob of pain the player sank to the turf and a cry went up from the spectators, who had no idea but that Pott was out of the match; and, in consequence, of the 1920 tournament. Mr. Roberts, who admits never having beaten his vis-a-vis in a tournament match, must have had visions of turning the trick—but in a way that would scarcely have been satisfactory.

REFUSED TO QUIT

Far be it from such! Pott, like the fine sportsman and jolly good American he is, refused to "stay down." Taking but a few moments to recover from the shock of the wrench, and to rub his injured knee-cap back into half-decent shape, he picked up his racket and announced that he was ready to continue the game.

Roberts, although he gracefully refrained from placement shots which would compel his rival to run about the court, promptly ran-out the game and set, Mr. Pott showing plainly that he was suffering during the last two games.

With scarcely any rest the pair continued, Mr. Pott improving as time went on and his knee being quite strong again at the end of the match. He simply bullied that injured member back into shape. Try it some day, if you have water-on-knee and a sufficient stock of courage!

A THRILLING MATCH

As for the match itself, it provided what may truthfully be styled a dazzling brand of tennis, from start to finish. Scintillating rallies became so frequent that one lost all track of their number, while the volleying from the service lines—where each contestant elected to make his stand, save in cases of necessity—was beautiful.

I have seen world's champions play at Longwood, Forest Hills and Santa Barbara, but I have never witnessed prettier, more evenly matched tennis than Messrs. Pott and Roberts gave us yesterday afternoon.

Up to the time of his fall Mr Pott was at the top of his game, while Mr. Roberts was playing "over his head," as the saying goes. They alternated in games in the first set, one-all, two-all, three-all, four-all, five-all, Pott relying on a terrific forehand larrup from a position slightly above the waist, while Roberts contented himself with a "get-them-back" game, played principally off his splendid backhand

HAIR-RAISING RALLIES

Following Mr. Pott's accident and the consequent loss of the first set the pair opened up the second "chukker" with a series of magnificent rallies, again alternating the games until stood at three all. Here Pott's splendid placements along the lines gave Roberts trouble and the former took two games. Roberts managed to win his own service, thanks to a couple of "horse-shoe letts"—meaning returns which strike the top of the net and drop over for points—but succumbed in the next game after he had carried it to deuce.

Pott outed badly at the beginning of the deciding set, but soon steadied down and began to smash pretty placements into the court-corners for "aces." Roberts, at this point, did some beautiful overhead work on his rival's occasional lobs, but started to net badly after two games and allowed Pott to secure a winning advantage.

A REAL "SIZZLER"

The fifth game of this set was a "Sizzler," so replete was it with wonderful volleying and midcourt rallies which brought cheers and applause from the benches. The score went to deuce five times in this game before Mr. Roberts finally managed to annex it.

From then on Mr. Roberts weakened noticeably and Mr. Pott, who seemed to have entirely forgotten his game knee, had little or no difficulty in capturing the games necessary to take the set and match.

The detailed scores of this splendid exhibition, for which both players deserve high praise, were as follows:

Walter Hagen Back Home, But Has No 'Alibi'

New York, July 25.—Walter Hagen, open golf champion of the United States, who failed so noticeably in his quest for the open title of Great Britain over the Deal links, but who made amends in part by winning the open championship of France from a strong field which included George Duncan, winner of the big tournament in Great Britain, arrived here yesterday on the Aquitania.

He had no excuses to offer for his defeat in England beyond saying that the course was not to his liking and that in trying to play short to insure better direction he lost his golfing touch and with it some of his confidence.

He was modestly proud of his French title, and spoke in high praise of the many courtesies extended to both him and Jim Barnes on their trip abroad.

Hagen was accompanied on the trip across by Thomas D. Armour, who has won a number of tournaments in France. He is planning to play in a number of tournaments in this country.

Hagen and Armour were opponents in the ship's tournament, but the former drove so viciously that the golfing machine of the Aquitania came to grief and no result was recorded.

Yankee Training Methods Big Factor In America's Victory At 1920 Olympiaa

Finns, Whose Coach Studied American System, Proved Its Benefits By Finishing Second—Britons Weren't "Heady"

By Jack Moakley

BY JACK MOAKLEY

Our decisive victory in this year's Olympic meet was due to our all around supremacy. Where we showed the most brilliance was in the sprints, the hurdles, the high jump and the pole vault. American training methods prevailed in all important victories gained by any team. I have already pointed out, at the time of his record-breaking performance, that Thompson, the high hurdler, while he might be running as a Canadian, all his training was really American.

I know that every American who witnessed the games this year and felt the inspiration which he got when the Stars and Stripes were hoisted time after time to show that American prowess had triumphed will go home feeling the same as I do, that we have a wonderful record to maintain in the future, but that it will require co-ordination and widespread interest in athletics in America to do so.

FINNS USED U.S. METHODS

This year we find Finland next to America in the list of competitors. The Finnish coaching staff was excellent. Piccola, who was in charge of the Finnish team, spent several years in America, closely following American athletics and American training methods. Most of his men are not from colleges, as so many of ours are.

Piccola counselled the Finnish athletes to emulate the Americans in saving their energy for the crucial test, just as Nurmi, the iron man of this meet, was trained as a runner to preserve his strength for the final effort. This showed the excellent character of the Finn's running strategy.

WHERE BRITONS MADE MISTAKES

The Englishmen made the mistake very often of outrunning themselves in the heats and then hadn't strength enough left to come on at the critical time. Finland's record is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that she has a population to draw from only a little larger than that of Manhattan. While the Italians showed much of the Finns' stamina, they hadn't the judgment to conserve their strength. However, both seemed to have more stamina than the Swedes. At critical times the Swedes did not have enough fight in them. Backmann, for instance, did not fight Nurmi for first place in the cross country when Nurmi passed him as he came into the Stadium to do the last 300 meters of the distance.

BETTER LUCK NEXT TIME

The Finns in this meet were head and shoulders above other European nations. The British had good all-around runners, but they were not heady. They lacked judgment, while in the field England was a failure. There is, nevertheless, new blood evident in English athletics, and great interest in American methods is being evinced by the Briton. The newer men are not going to be set in their ways like some of the older ones have been.

IMMENSE CROWD GATHERS TO SEE WORLD SERIES

"Women First!" Is Fiat As Brooklyn And Cleveland Prepare To Clash

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Brooklyn, N. Y., October 5, (a.m.)—Long before daylight this morning great crowds of baseball fans had gathered before each of the eight bleacher entrances to Ebbets Field, where the Brooklyn Robins and the Cleveland Indians will clash this afternoon in the first game of the world's baseball championship series of 1920.

It is not expected that the management of the Brooklyn club will be able to accommodate more than one-half of the enthusiasts who are knocking at their doors, pleading for an opportunity to spend their money. Women will be cared for first, as far as possible.

Grand-stand tickets are selling at hitherto-unheard-of premiums for each of the three games which are to be played here before the teams move to Cleveland. Reports from the Forest City say that the same conditions prevail there.

Cleveland was a slight favorite in the betting last night and this morning, both to win the initial contest and to win the series.

The weather for the opening game is clear and cool, with a slight breeze going during the morning hours.

Leonard Knocks Out Britt In The 5th

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Hartford, Conn., October 5.—Benny Leonard, lightweight boxing champion of the world, scored a technical knockout over Frankie Britt of New Bedford here last evening, when the referee stopped the bout in the fifth round of a scheduled 10-round contest, to save Britt from further punishment.

Leonard is "fighting himself into condition" for his prospective clash with Jack Britton, welterweight champion, which was to have taken place in Cleveland on the evening of September 30, but which was prevented by frigid weather.

EYE-WITNESS DESCRIBES HANKOW CRICKET MATCHES WON BY SHANGHAI TEAM

Story Of Recent Navy And Interport Contests Up-river Graphically Told—Piercy, Clifford, Tippin And Murphy Make Enviable Showings On Rain-Soaked Field

Shanghai met and defeated Hankow for the second year in succession. The match taking place on the beautiful ground at Hankow on Friday and Saturday, the 1st and 2nd October. Rain had fallen heavily on Thursday and when Friday dawned the prospects of play were indeed remote, as threatening clouds still overhung the skies and the rain still drizzled down.

At 11 o'clock the rain ceased and, with the weather brightening, the pitch was inspected and declared fit for play in the afternoon.

Fortunately the weather held good and after both teams had luncheoned in the pavilion a start was made at 2:15, Shanghai batting first on a wicket somewhat soft but playing quite easily.

The opening was not promising as Jones left in Whitamore's first over. Piercy then became associated with Clifford and the pair saw the half century appear before Clifford got in front of a straight one from Pearson.

The useful work was carried on by Robertson, who scored a very valuable 20; but the honors fell to Piercy, whose 36 was the result of good sound cricket.

The "tail" did not wag and the whole side was out by 4:30 for 118.

BAILEY "FLATTERED"

Bailey bowled very finely for Hankow when put on for the second time, although poor batting rather flattered his analysis.

Hankow commenced their innings shortly before 5 o'clock, but they batted deplorably against Cobb and Murphy that, when stumps were drawn for the day, 9 wickets were down for 45 runs.

Even admitting that both Cobb and Murphy bowled well and the light was anything but good, there was no excuse for the sorry show made by Hankow.

But for dropped catches the whole side would have been out for under 30. Nash's patient display in the latter part of the innings was the one redeeming feature.

THE SECOND DAY

Saturday blossomed into a glorious day and, when play commenced at 11 o'clock, Nash was soon bowled by Cobb.

Shanghai entered upon their second venture with Piercy and Clifford in possession, but with only 7 runs on the board Clifford was bowled by a "shooter" from Reynell.

Wickets then fell quickly to Reynell until Cobb and Tippin collared the bowling. Piercy had previously retired when rather badly hurt by a rising ball from Bailey, and when he continued his innings he was obviously in pain and was soon bowled. Piercy again played fine cricket for his valuable 20 runs.

TIPPIN A HERO

Cobb's contribution of 24 came at a time when runs were badly needed, and Tippin, in scoring 41, became the hero of the game. It was a very fine effort and practically without blemish. Murphy also hit out well, but the innings closed for 119.

This time Reynell bowled very well for Hankow, repeating his performance in the match last year.

Hankow were set 180 runs to make in quite 3 hours play on Saturday afternoon, and although Lester and Nash started well, the issue was never in doubt.

Cobb once again had the batsmen in difficulties but when Tippin relieved Murphy, wickets fell quickly, half the side being out for 23 runs.

A DYING GASP

Reynell and Bailey then put on 22 runs before Clifford and Grimshaw were put on vice Tippin and Cobb.

The end soon came, Grimshaw getting rid of Reynell and the last 3 wickets falling to Clifford, ably assisted by good work in the long-field by Robertson.

The total reached 69 runs, thus leaving Shanghai easy winners by 111 runs.

The umpires were Mr. C. S. Barff (Shanghai) and Mr. W. Saunderson (Hankow). It is questionable whether any two umpires were ever before called upon to do so much as in this particular game, and to say that they gave every satisfaction is

The Girl. A Horse And A Dog. By Francis Lynde. Charles Scribner's Sons.

Francis Lynde's ability to tell a story is enhanced by the virtue of a high degree of suspense and the cumulative effect of rousing situation after situation. "The Girl, a Horse and a Dog" is a book built frankly for amusement purposes, but it is more substantial than the usual run of adventure stories. Mr. Lynde possesses the power to develop character in a consistent manner, to afford the reader glimpses of types which live, and to do this without halting the steady flow of a narrative that steadily rises in its interest.

When Stannie, somewhat of a wastrel, is left nothing in his Grandfather Dudley's will, it is pretty much of a painful surprise to him. But when his brother sends him a letter informing him that his share of grandfather's estate is worth about $400,000, that it lies in a perfectly safe repository between the 105th and 110th degrees of longitude west from Greenwich, and the 35th and 40th degrees of north latitude and that it may be identified by the presence of a girl with brown hair and blue eyes and a small mole on her left shoulder, a piebald horse, which the girl rides, and a dog with a split face—half black and half white, Stannie's clock is nearly stopped. At first he takes the letter as a joke, but later it is impressed upon him as gospel truth. So before the reader is far into the book Stannie sets forth for the great West to find his legacy with nothing to go upon but the above enumerated clues. From the time he meets the brown-whiskered stranger on the train his adventures start.

Besides being taken for a lunatic Stannie is deprecated also by those he meets as a person incapable of work. His reputation as an idler is against him. But Stannie does heroic things before the book is through. He finds the girl, of course, also the piebald horse and the splitfaced dog. Also he finds a drowned mine which it is his task to drain and to put into working order again. This task is not easy, for arrayed against him is an intelligent and unscrupulous man who is representing interests anxious to get the mine.

Part of the book is taken up with the defense of the mine against this unscrupulous person and his hired roughs. It is an epic of a situation with Stannie and old Hiram holding on to the bitter end. For swift action, plenty of gunfire and exploding dynamite, cross-purposes and entanglements of plot Mr. Lynde is to be congratulated. He shapes his plot with astuteness and provides a thrill per chapter for the anxious reader. The idea of putting the book down after it is once started until it is finished is impossible to the confirmed lover of adventure yarns.

As for characterisation, besides Stannie himself there is Old Hiram, indomitable and ready to fight to the finish, and there is Bullerton, who cannot be doubted from the very beginning as a thirty-third degree villain, dyed-in-the-wool and with the trademark of unscrupulousness stamped all over him. And there is Jeanie, blue-eyed and masterful, through whose foresight and cleverness Stannie is eventually able to claim his legacy. Mr. Lynde's book should prove extremely popular for a few idle hours' amusement. It is bound to make the time pass quickly.

TALES OF MYSTERY

Tales Of Mystery And Horror By Maurice Level. Translated from the French by Alys Eyre Macklin. With an Introduction by Henry B. Irving. New York; Robert M. McBride & Co.

To say of a writer that he suggests Poe, de Maupassant, O. Henry and Thomas Burke would sound at first as if he must be a great master of the short story. But the conclusion would be as fallacious as the assumption that a crazy-qualit made from the cast-off clothing of Princesses would necessarily make a gown as beautiful in its lines as one of Paquin's most graceful creations.

Maurice Level, the French writer, twenty-six of whose "Tales of Mystery and Horror" have been translated into English by Alys Eyre Macklin, does suggest all of the above-named authors without approximating the literary merit of the least of them. He has Poe's predilection for supernatural and gruesome themes, something of de Maupassant's technique of compression, a flair for the "irony of fate" formula, which was so characteristic of O. Henry's plot, and a kinship with Burke's nostalgie de la boue. But there the likeness ends he has none of the qualities mentioned in a degree sufficient to raise him to the level of the men he suggests; one patch of royal purple does not make a kingly bed-covering of the gay-quilt.

The comparison with such great creators of contes is perhaps unfair to M. Level, whose stories certainly entitle him to a place in the first rank of contemporary writers of short stories. Henry B. Irving, who writes an introduction to this collection of tales, points out that the character of Level's work courts comparison with some of the greatest living writers, and adds: "It would be idle to pretend that M. Level's stories are all of equal merit: in so prolific a writer it would be impossible that they should be."

The unevenness of quality for which we are prepared by the above remark is all too apparent in this first collection of the French author's stories to be translated into English. There are three stories out of the twenty-six—"That Scoundrel Miron," "Blue Eyes" and "The Beggar"—that stand out sharply in contrast to their more mediocro bookmates. Of these the first-named appealed most strongly to the present reviewer.

"That Scoundrel Miron" is a painter who prostitutes his artistic talents to earn with "pot boilers" the money he wants to support an extravagant mistress. Her extravagances finally drive him to passing a bad check and he has to flee Paris to avoid consequences. The mistress promptly deserts him. For fifteen years Miron remains an exile, but his returned artistic ambitions finally triumph over his fear of prison and he returns to Paris and starts painting again under the name of Loriot. The art dealer to whom he takes his first picture tells him that he will supplant Miron and offers a flattering price for his canvas. Miron has meanwhile become passionately proud of the name that he disgraced as a man but made honored as an artist.

We would have liked the story better if he had signed the Loriot picture with his real name of Miron, even at the cost of going to prison for his old offense.

COUNSEL OF THE UNGODLY

The Counsel Of The Ungodly. By Charles Brackett. New York: D. Appleton & Co.

One of the writers who wax wealthy adapting novels for the stage will find ready to hand in Charles Brackett's "The Counsel of the Ungodly" a plot full of situations ideal for his purposes. The improbabilities of the story would not be noticed on the musical comedy stage or even in a farce comedy, but they are somewhat glaring in the more slowly moving vehicle of a novel.

Peter Van Hoeven, member of one of New York's oldest families, who tells the story in the first person, reaches the conclusion early in life that America lacks men of leisure more than any other aesthetic commodity. After devoting the greater part of his life to a successful attempt to supply this deficiency, he finds himself, at the age of 62, cast into a draughty world without a penny to continue his existence as a gentleman of leisure.

In his extremity, he recalls once remarking to his brother that the family portraits suggested a line of perfect butlers waiting for positions in some ideal employment agency. The recollection suggests a means of livelihood to him and he becomes butler to Mrs. Isaac Daison, a lady devoid of culture, who has made a war fortune and wants to "break into society."

Peter falls in placid, old-man love with Miss Mary Davison and appoints himself fond champion of her happiness. Through his administration of "the counsel of the ungodly" Mary's career progresses uninterruptedly to the "and-they-lived-happily-ever-after" point on Page 267.

The author's flexible style and skill in drollery, distinctly above the average, makes one regret that he has not employed his literary ability in a less inconsequential plot. By far the best thing in the book is the whimsical humor Mr. Brackett has put in the mouth of Francis Locker, the vividly high-spirited nephew of Peter Van Hoeven, who is introduced into the book well along in the story.

A quotation or two from Francis' raillery will serve better than anything else to give the flavor of the author's humor:

Greek drama was written to cast the burden of responsibility for the gods' conduct toward mortals on man's obliquities, a rather difficult task considering the code of morals obtaining on Olympus at the time. If it did not succeed, the goddess who appeared at the end of the play became the target for any bits of fish and garlic that were left over from lunch. There was sporting interest there.

I'll not have you learn to make a beast of yourself. Go to dances, watch them, feel your own superiority, but don't dance.

I know that men of your age should stick to the cities. Nature just exhausts them. They need turmoil. There's only one decent death left for a man of eighty odd. That's meeting a subway train head on in fair fight.

From the frequent use in his book of such colloquialisms as "swank," "funk," "get on with it" etc., we surmise that Mr. Brackett is an English writer.

The Treasure Of The Isle Of Mist

The Treasure Of The Isle Of Mist. By H. W. Tarn. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

The present reviewer has never before heard of W. W. Tarn; but it will not be the aforesaid reviewer's fault if great numbers of people do not rejoice to learn of his existence and hold his work always in memory and delight. For W. W. Tarn has written a book so beautiful, so whimsical, so exquisite alike in its humor, its loveliness and its sheer charm that it will be a dull reader indeed to whom it does not bring an abiding joy.

"The Treasure of the Isle of Mist" bears, on the page which is given in most books to a formal dedication, the simple descriptive legend, "A fairy tale for my daughter." It is indeed a fairy tale—and the reviewer confesses that it arouses a very definite wish for a daughter to read it to. But it is by no means a "children's book," much as children will love it. It is a book for all people who love fancy and follow with rejoicing where true fancy leads, a book for people who appreciate whimsical humor, dry, albeit human and loving, flashes of wit. It is a book, too, for the men and women and children who like to read of simple, wholesome things, of courage and kindness and loyalty. And it is a book of rare satisfaction for those who find joy in the beauty of English prose. Moreover, we defy any grown-up to say that it is not an entertaining story.

Fiona and her father, the Student, "lived in a little grey house on the shores of a grey sea-loch in the Isle of Mist," and to them came a hawker, selling buttons, who gave to Fiona the gift of a search—the search for the treasure of the Isle of Mist. Fiona, the author tells us, "was a long-legged creature of 15, who laughed when her father threatened her with school on the mainland, and she had a warm heart and a largish size in shoes." And it was not the treasure itself that the hawker gave her, but the search.

"Youth she has," he said, "and freedom, and the joy of life. Wonder also, and dim imaginings of unseen things. And of the things which men desire, fame and power are not worth giving, and love is not mine to give. . . . I give you the Search, the search for the treasure of the Isle of Mist. Others have searched for it before, and some have found, but the treasure never grows less."

There is a tale of another treasure there on the Isle of Mist, a treasure of Spanish doubloons, hid long ago by men whose secret all but died with them. It did not quite do that—which is part of the story. But so far as Fiona and the Student knew, the secret was lost. Fiona did not want that treasure. The Student did not want it either. The Student did not want money at all. If he had it, he explained, "My precious time would be spent in arguing with my gardener and endeavoring to conceal my ignorance from my chauffeur." But the Urchin wanted the treasure, so that he could get a gun.

The story, merely as a story, is charming—too charming to be spoiled by being retold in detail here. The symbolism—to use an unduly pretentious word—is simple enough for a child, eternal enough for any grown person to delight in and profit by. There is here all that wholesome cheer, that fine and gentle love of all living things, that courage and devotion and gayety that hundreds of atrocious "glad books" may strive for in vain. In "The Treasure of the Isle of Mist" there is truth and beauty.

And the prose is exquisite, with all the haunting, inevitable rhythm that is the heritage of the Celt, with loveliness in word and phrase and music. There are few things in the books that come to us so beautiful as this:

"It is the spirit of the island which you love," said the King, "and which henceforth loves you. You have spoken face to face with bird and beast and with the beings who knew and loved the land before your race was. Today you have the freedom of the island, and of all living things in it; they are your friends forever. And to the dead in the graveyards you are kin. All that is there has passed into your blood, the old, lost loves, the old impossible loyalties, the old forgotten heroisms and tendernesses; all these are yours, and yours are the songs that were sung long ago, and the tales which were told by the fireside; and the deeds of the men and women of old have become part of you. You can walk now through the crowded city and never know it, for the wind from the heather will be about you where you go; you can stand in the tumult of men and never hear them, for around you will be the silence of your own sea. That is the treasure of the Isle of Mist; the island has given you of its soul. You have found greater things already; you will find greater things yet again. But, such as it is, it is the best gift which we of the fairy world have to give."

This is a rare and beautiful book, a real discovery. It is worthy in its own way to stand beside James Stephens's inimitable "Demigods" and "The Crock of Gold" and Stella Benson's "Living Alone." That is high praise—but so it is. And there on the present reviewer's shelves stands "The Treasure of the Isle of Mist."

HEALTH HINTS FOR HOT WEATHER

How To Sustain Your Strength.

The most important thing of the sustainment of health and strength during the hot season is to keep your blood in good condition. Prolonged heat makes the blood thin and watery, and thus throws the weakened system open to attacks of fever, diarrhoea, dysentery and other maladies. When the blood is anaemic, or improverished, nervous ailments, dyspepsia, neuralgia and headaches result, and the whole body quickly gets into an unhealthy state.

There is nothing better to build up the blood and make it rich and red than Dr. Williams' pink pills; it is for this reason that these world-famous pills are so immensely popular as a blood and nerve tonic in tropical countries—throughout the equatorial East, Central and South America, and northern Australia, for example. By the aid of Dr. Williams' pink pills not only do men and women sustain their health and vigour in these lands of everlasting midsummer, but also many thousands of sufferers from maladies resulting from impure watery blood or disordered nerves have been restored by their use. Indisputable evidence proving that they have cured almost countless cases of anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, sciatica, malaria, as well as the special ailments of women.

Obtainable from chemists and medicine venders everywhere. Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people can also be had from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, at one dollar fifty cents the bottle, or eight dollars for six bottles, post free. If ailing or weak now let them begin to help you without delay.

PRAIRIES A BLAZE OF COLOR

Myriads Of Peonies Grown On Banks Of The Red River

The Canadian prairies, toward mid-Summer, became a glowing field of peonies, reports a Winnipeg newspapper, and recalling Wordsworth's daffodils, beautiful as they were along the margin of Ullswater, wringing from the poet the exclamation, "Ten thousand saw I at a glance," the newspaper writer asserts that they could not compare with the field of peonies that W. G. Scott cultivates in luxuriant flowering acres on the banks of the Red River, where the poet might exclaim "A million saw I at a glance."

Before the Summer was well advanced far more than ten thousand peonies had actually been cut, and thousands upon thousands remained in their glory of color and exquisite perfume. Myriads there were, large and white, as cumulous clouds in a sunny sky; myriads in lovely shades of pink and of darkly rich red, making an unforgettable flower show.

SHANGHAI v. H. M. NAVY

This match was played in Hankow on Wednesday, September 29, and a very interesting game resulted in a win for Shanghai by 7 wickets.

The Navy eleven mostly comprised omicers and men from H. M. S. Hawkins but places were given to Lieut. Harrison and Pay Mammett of H. M. S. Kinsha both players being well known to Shanghai cricket.

Play was scheduled to commence at 10 o'clock but owing to the reception accorded Vice-Admiral Duff it was not until 10:45 that Shanghai took the field, Clifford having won the toss, and sent the Navy in.

The start was disastrous for the Navy as 4 wickets were down for 18 runs Captain Wodehouse, the rugby footballer of International fame, then became associated with Lt. Harrison, and the pair were responsible for bringing up the total to 62 before Harrison was caught behind the wicket.

Midshipman Cook then assisted Wodehouse to add 75 runs for the sixth wicket, the tiffin interval intervening before Cook was bowled by one of Clifford's slows.

With the score at 141 Captain Wodehouse's five innings came to an end. He started shakily, being badly let off when he had only scored 10, but afterwards hit well, especially on the leg side, Pte. Wilkins and Capt. Henderson hit out well before Lt. Bonham-Carter applied the closure.

Tippin bowled well for Shanghai and so did Cobb; who, however, experienced wretched luck.

Left with two hours in which to score the runs, Clifford and Jones started well for Shanghai. 35 being on the board before Jones put his toe in front of a straight one from Harrison. Piercy then partnered Clifford and the pair of them collared the bowling to such an extent that in ninety minutes victory was made possible.

Both players batted finely. Clifford hitting 19 fours, mostly drives past cover. After he left at 167, Leslie made his 14 runs quickly, and then Murphy made the winning hit ten minutes from time.

Piercy, in carrying out his bat for 54, batted with great skill and foreshadowed his further successes in the Hankow Interport match.

It was a meritorious performance for Shanghai and only made possible by the very sporting declaration of Lt. Bonham-Carter.

INDO-CHINA FIRM DENIES WAGE RAISE

Company Has Reached Point Where Further Increases Are Impossible

(Reuter's Pactic Service)

Hongkong, October 6.—Speaking at the annual meeting of the Indo-China Steam Navigation Company, Ltd., today, the Chairman said that the Company was again faced with the prospect of trouble in the ranks of the floating staff, caused by the demands of the guilds for a further increase of pay of 50 percent all round.

Figures proved not only that the men were extremely well paid but that the Company had reached the end of its tether in the matter of salaries and concessions.

MUST HOLD DOWN COSTS

The Directors had agreed that, come what may, a halt must be called to the rising costs otherwise there would be a really serious prospect of being forced out of business altogether.

From information at his, the Chairman's, disposal, it appeared that the policy of the guilds was being dictated, not with a view to harmonious working with the Company nor with the slightest regard to the future continuance of the Company, but with the sole object of immediate gain on the part of those, who had little or nothing to lose, with no thought for the morrow or for British prestige in the East.

WAGE ADVANCES

Wages had advanced from £66,000 to £248,000 during the years of the war. The Company did not propose to be dictated to by the guilds.

It was ready to meet them in matters concerning the welfare of the men within reasonable limits but reserved the right to know when those limits had been reached.

Subsequent speakers supported the attitude of the Directors.

SOUTH AFRICAN TRADE ENVOY HERE

Mr. Julius Jeppe of Cape Town, South Africa, who is Senior Royal Danish Consul in South Africa, Consul-General for Greece for South Africa in charge of Rumanian interests, Justice of the Peace for Cape Town and formerly Imperial Japanese Consul for British South Africa, is a visitor in Shanghai on a trade mission. He is at the Astor House and before returning to South Africa whence he sailed last June for Japan, he will visit Hongkong and go on to India stopping on the way at the larger commercial centers along the Far Eastern trade routes.

Mr. Jeppe was a pioneer in establishing what became an extensive trade in wool between South Africa and Japan, having opened up trade connections with Japan in 1916 on a former visit to the Far East. He, explained yesterday that this trade has come to a standstill due to adverse exchange conditions, the general post-war unrest throughout the world, and also to shipping difficulties that have developed since the war.

He said that his present tour is being made with a view to maintaining the trade connections that he established on his former visit and also to extend South African trade interests in the Far East. He expects to be in Shanghai for probably another week.

Tax Installments Can Be Paid Weekly

Liverpool, August 21. Bottle Borough, which adjoins Liverpool, has just adopted a novel system for the payment of taxes. The borough authorities have just issued adhesive receipts in the form of stamps, which have been designed for the corporation.

These receipts may be purchased in the town hall and at some schools. They are in the form of a book and are in denominations ranging from two to seven shillings, with some smaller denominations to make up odd amounts. Under the system taxpayers are allowed to pay their taxes in thirty-six weekly installments.

The system is regarded by experts as ingenious and practical. Already it has been adopted by about 2,600 taxpayers.

Marine Changes

The following changes in the merchant marine service took place during the week:

China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company-Second officer of the Kwangtee, Mr. C. Hansen, promoted to chief officer; Mr. S. Warland appointed second officer of the Kwangtee; Mr. W. R. Elders appointed second officer of the Yushun; Mr. P. Hurro appointed third engineer of the Kiangteen; Mr. Edward Fitzpatrick appointed third engineer of the Hsinchi.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in civilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

SCHIFF'S WILL GIVES FORTUNE FOR CHARITIES

Banker Who Financed Deals Of Harriman Makes Generous Bequests

(U. S. Naval Radio)

New York, October 4.—The will of the late Mr. Jacob Schiff, the well-known banker, which has just been filed, discloses charitable bequests and bonuses amounting to $1,300,000.

Mr. Schiff has been intimately associated with the financial history of New York and of America generally for the past quarter of a century. Backed by foreign capital, Mr. Schiff and the firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, supported the late Mr. E. H. Harriman in the great financial adventure by which the Union Pacific Railway was reorganised in 1897, and in the subsequent transactions by which the Union Pacific railroad obtained control of the Southern Pacific and other railroads. This operation is regarded as one of the most important in which Mr. Schiff engaged as a banker. It involved a vast sum of money, possibly hundreds of millions of dollars, gave Mr. Schiff a prestige among bankers which endured throughout the remainder of his life, and contributed to make Mr. E. H. Harriman the best known railroad organiser in the United States.

BORN IN GERMANY

Born at Frankfort, Germany, January 10, 1847, Mr. Schiff was educated in Germany, and when 19 years old, removed to New York, where he entered upon his business career, beginning as a bank clerk. A few years later, he became a member of the firm of bankers and brokers. In 1875, Mr. Schiff married Theresa daughter of Solomon Loeb and became a member of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb and Company, of which his father-in-law was then the senior partner.

When Mr. Loeb retired 10 years later, Mr. Schiff became the head of the firm, and has since occupied that position. After his successful share in financing the organisation of the Union Pacific reorganisation, Mr. Schiff became one of the most widely-known and influential bankers in the United States. He has been director of several leading banks, trusts, life insurance and rail road companies, including the Union Pacific Railroad and the Western Union Telegraph Company. His firm acted as fiscal agents for some of the leading corporations of the United States.

ADMIRED BY MCADOO

For more than a score of years Mr. Schiff was prominent in various forms of charity and philanthrophy. He was vice-president of the Baron de Hirsch fund, founder and president of the Montefiers Home for Chronic Invalids, one of the founders of Barnard College and contributed liberally to almost every Jewish movement or charitable institution and to many nonsectarian ones in New York. He gave generously to encourage the study of Hebrew literature, founded the Semitic Museum at Harvard and the Jewish Theological Seminary of New York.

William G. McAdoo, then Secretary of the Treasury, in a tribute to Mr. Schiff on the occasion of his 70th birthday, described him as "a rare combination of the financier and altruist."

Mr. Schiff has one son, Mortimer L Schiff, also a member of the firm of which his father was the head, and one daughter, Mrs. Felix Warburg, wife of another member of that firm. He had a home in Fifth Avenue, New York and a country home at Seabright, New Jersey.

Men On Destroyers Are Given Farewell

Tuesday evening at the Navy Y.M.C.A. a pleasant affair was given in farewell to sailors of the U.S.S. Greer, Elliott, Lea, Tarbell and Yarnall who left yesterday for Manila PI.

Music and games were the features of the evening and those who assisted in the entertainment were: Miss Belle Breck, Social Secretary of the "Y," Miss Alice Fitch, Mrs. C. W. Petitt, Miss Taylor and Miss Dyer.

From the enthusiastic cheering of these entertaining it may be said that the affair was much enjoyed by the guests of the evening.

Manila Maru Brings Mail From America

Mail from the United States was received at the American postoffice last evening, having been landed from the Manila Maru. It had been expected by Postmaster Everett that the next mail would be received here upon the arrival of the Empress of Russia on October 8, but the authorities took advantage of an earlier sailing and sent a large number of sacks on the Manila Maru.

If you use

Kolynos Tooth Paste

daily—it is impossible for your teeth to collect "so-called" film or your mouth to become over-acid. We claim no "secret process" with Kolynos. What we do claim is that your teeth under the care of Kolynos will become CLEAN—Just as clean as an ivory knife handle.

WHITE—Just as white as Nature intended them to be. We use no bleaching chemicals.

FREE FROM DECAY—Because a clean tooth does not decay.

Do not be led away by tooth pastes which advertise themselves as "bleachers" or "solvents." Teeth can only be cleaned in the old-time rational way—with a good tooth brush and a sensible tooth paste which cleans and polishes, and leaves your teeth what they should be—just clean.

On Sale at all Chemists.

THE man who would forge to the front in this competitive age must be a man of prompt and determined decision. Like Caesar, he must burn his ships behind him, and make retreat forever impossible. Prompt decision and sublime audacity have carried many a successful man over perilous crises where deliberation would have been ruin. Are you still undecided about WILDER'S MUSK, if so I won't be for long. Forget all the other trade names by which Musk is known but remember WILDER'S MUSK, genuine Musk-minus the pods, protected by the world-renowned Trade Name "WILDER'S MUSK." ELLY WIDLER, TATSIENLU, SZECHWAN, PROVINCE.

Constitutionality Of A Separate Peace

BY T. R. JERNIGAN

A FEW weeks before Congress adjourned it passed a resolution in favor of the United States government making a separate peace with Germany. The resolution was vetoed by the President, and for the reason that he would not consent to break the association which his country maintained with Great Britain, France, Italy and the other powers whose united efforts defeated Germany. The Republican members of Congress, by whose votes the resolution was passed, attempted to pass it over the veto of the President but failed. There were enough Democrats in Congress who would not agree that America abandon her friends and assist Germany in the desperate game of world politics in which that nation is now engaged.

But there is a constitutional view of this subject, and the contention of Mr. Harding, that America should abandon her friends, by an act of bad faith, would be very likely to encounter several impediments. The main impediment would be the Constitution of the United States. In the opinion of the best authorities on the Constitution, Mr. Harding's program has committed him to little more than a prolonged law suit. If this gentleman should be elected President, and Congress should pass his proposed peace declaration, the declaration would at once be called to the attention of the Supreme Court which, in all probability, would declare it invalid.

No one doubts the constitutional power of Congress to declare war, but the power to declare peace is materially different, and to assume that one power justifies the other is not necessarily sound logic or in any sense justified. But fortunately this very question has been discussed and, it was supposed, settled. In the convention of 1787, which framed the Constitution, the question was first debated. It was specially considered by the "fathers" whether Congress should have the right to "declare peace" as well as to "declare war," and the decision was in the negative. James Madison was a member of the Convention and is known to have taken full notes of its proceedings. In Vol. V, Page 439, of the notes, afterwards purchased by the Government and published as the Madison Papers, appears the following:

"Mr. Butler moved to give the legislature (Congress) the power of peace as they were to have that of war."

"Mr. Gerry seconded him."

"On the motion for adding, 'And peace after war,' it was unanimously negatived."

The provision in the Constitution that "Congress shall have power to declare war," was provided therein by the unanimous approval of the Convention, and the attempt to amend the provision was defeated with equal unanimity.

According to Mr. Harding the work of the Convention should be reversed by giving Congress the power both to declare war and peace. There are, however, some very good reasons why Mr. Harding may not be as safe a guide as the broad-minded and experienced statesmen who framed the Constitution under which the American people have lived and prospered. In this connection it can be stated that the articles of confederation, under which the Government was administered before the adoption of the Constitution, did give to Congress the power to declare war and to make peace, but this fact emphasises the other fact of the deliberate intention of the Convention of 1787 to take from Congress the power to make peace, and to repose the power elsewhere in the government.

The reason for the negative action of the Convention was made clear at the time by Mr. Ellsworth when, in debating the proposal he said: "There is a material difference between the cases of making war and making peace. War is a simple and overt declaration; peace attended with secret and intricate negotiations." It ought to be evident that "Congress sitting as a body can properly declare war, but Congress sitting as a body, cannot properly declare peace, because peace necessarily involves terms of settlement, a treaty establishing future relations, and the like."

It was for such reasons the Convention gave the President the power to negotiate treaties, and conduct diplomatic relations, and in order to safeguard this power it gave the Senate the right to co-operate with him. In his work on the Constitution, Judge Story sums up the whole matter in these terms: "It was proposed to add the power to make peace, but this was unanimously rejected upon the plain ground that it more properly belonged to the treaty-making power. The experience of Congress under the federation of the difficulties attending on vesting the treaty-making power in a large legislative assembly, was too deeply felt to justify the hazard or another experiment."

The World's Work of September submits its views as plainly as pertinently, if not in the same judicial tone as the great lawyer just quoted. Bearing on the subject is an editorial paragraph as follows:

"As a matter of policy, Mr. Harding's proposal is little less than infamous, inasmuch that it means we shall desert our Allies, and associate ourselves with Germany in its attempt to revise, or abolish, the Treaty of Versailles; as a matter of law, it is unconstitutional, inasmuch as the power to make peace is the joint duty of the President and the Senate. Mr. Harding's announced intention of obliterating himself in the negotiations adds force to the criticism that, under his administration, the White House will become merely the servile echo of the real powers on Capitol Hill."

President Wilson is criticised at this time, but in their hearts Americans admire a leader. Their proudest emotions are excited at the mention of the names of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Cleveland, and impartial history will add the name of Wilson. The former presidents here referred to were leaders and men who did their own thinking, not mere followers and official time-servers.

The Alleged Humorists

The Bride—You know Jack is such a flatterer. Married Friend—I know, my dear, but that is a fault that marriage usually cures.

"Did your rich uncle remember you in his will? "Not personally. But he endowed a home for the indigent."

Pat—O'ive traced me ancestry back to an Oirish king. Mike—Sure that's easy. What chanst has a dead man to defend himself?

She—I saw you, sir, with that horrid widow, and I shall send back your presents at once. He—Don't do that—send them to the widow.

"The girl who turned me down is a regular dog in the manger." "How so?" "She will neither accept my affection nor return it."

Binks—Did I tell you of the horrible fright I got on my wedding day? Winks—'S-sh! No gentleman should speak that way of his wife.

"Pop, will you tell me one thing about aviation expenses?" "What is that, son?" "Are they all overhead charges?"

"Bobby, what did you do with your peanut shells in the car?" "I put 'em in the overcoat pocket of that man I was sittin' by."

Despondent Suitor—It's no use. She says her decision is irrevocable. Cheerful Cynic—Then take heart, my boy. A woman who can make such a statement as that can't possibly know her own mind.

Now that the war is over
And now that the victory's won,
There's just one man that you can't forget—
The sportsman that shouldered the gun.
You may forget to say "Thank you"
(And it's easy enough to say),
You may regret he can't rank you
Among those who saw the fray.
But in Memory he will be foremost,
For I don't believe we'll forget
The deeds he did; and the deeds that bid
The rest of us pay our debt.

And in humbleness—adore.

MORE SLANG

It is quite in the fashion to be slangy, and that is one of the reasons, I suppose, that a number of correspondents have written me about local slang, university slang, and Australian slang.

'Gee-Wizz' writes: "Dear Domino, can you tell me if 'Chicken' is slang, or is it a correct term to use on occasions?" I have consulted various authorities on 'chicken' and they say the word has different interpretations. It might mean a bird that is good to eat, or an old bird, or even a downy bird. Then it seems that there is a certain species that's deadlier.

As usual I find that Shakespeare has used the word, and it is annotated thus: "Chuck, a chicken, a term of endearment." See 'Macbeth' and you will find "Be innocent of the knowledge dearest chuck etc." With these few words let us dispose of the chickens.

BLACK MONDAY

Is "Black Monday" a slang phrase, or has it any historical association? asks 'Week-End.'

In 1360, Edward III and his army were outside the gates of Paris. The Parisians had no wish to see them. Probably they had no passports or they were looked upon as Bolshevik delegates. Anyhow they had to stay outside. it was on a Monday, and the Fourteenth Day of April. The day was dark. Mist hovered around, and at times hail pelted down. It was so cold that horsemen died of exposure on their horses' backs. Edward's attempt on Paris failed.

THE NEW BARRIE

A few weeks ago we gave in these columns a revue of Barrie's new play "Mary Rose." It is interesting to report that it was the first play written by Barrie since a recent attack of writer's cramp drove him to the laborious use of his left hand.

As "Mary Rose" differs markedly in tone and level and quality from all the Barrie plays that have gone before, it is quite likely he now sits and stares in mild surprise at the kind of work which comes down his left arm.

I suppose, that having lost the use of the right arm, he had to use the one that was left.

WHICH REMINDS ME

A young lady was crossing the road on a very wet day. She was holding her dress a trifle high, so a well meaning old gentleman said to her, "Madam, you are holding your dress a little too high." The young lady retorted, "Well Sir, I have a perfect right." To this the gallant man replied "yes, madam, and a very nice left.

Egypt's Place In The Sun

(New York Times)

A new arrangement for Egypt, a better place in the tropical sun, had been expected since the announcement of the appointment of the Milner mission to draw up a new scheme of government. But the world was not prepared for the unofficial report issuing from London last week giving the terms of an agreement virtually providing for the independence of that most ancient land.

How far the policy of dealing with Egypt has developed since the appointment of the Milner mission may be seen by going back to the statement in the House of Lords by the British Foreign Secretary, Lord Curzon, on December 13 last:

"It will be the object of Lord Milner and his colleague, in consultation with the Sultan and his Ministers and representative Egyptians of all classes, to devise the details of a constitution by which all these parties shall be able, in their several spheres and in an increasing degree, to co-operate in the management of Egyptian affairs. British assistance and British guidance will still be required. Nor will any of those who have followed the history of Egypt for the last forty years and seen the astounding advance that she has made under our auspices question the necessity of this supervision."

ANSWERS NATIONALISTS

In the same address, the Foreign Minister made a direct answer to the Nationalists.

"I need hardly elaborate the reasons," he said, "for which Great Britain is compelled to interest herself in the political fortunes of Egypt, and is unable to give any encouragement to the claim of complete national independence. Quite apart from the fact that Egypt, if left to stand alone, could neither protect her frontier against external aggression nor guarantee a strong and impartial Government at home, her geographical position at the gate of Palestine, at the doorway of Africa and the highroad to India, renders it impossible for the British Empire, with any regard to its own security and conditions, to wash its hands of the responsibility for Egypt.

"Egypt is, of course, primarily an Egyptian interest; the good government and the prosperity and happiness of its people are the highest consideration. But it is also a British interest of capital importance, and I suspect that there are few who would deny that it is also a world interest, and that the world interest is best secured by leaving Egypt under the aegis of a great civilised power."

The Secretary for Foreign Affairs merely stated the orthodox view of Egypt. But these are the terms of the new Anglo-Egyptian relation as published in The London Times last week:

HERE ARE THE TERMS

"Egypt will recognise Great Britain's privileged position in the Valley of the Nile and agree, in case of war, to afford every facility for access to Egyptian territory. Great Britain will maintain a garrison in Egypt in the Canal Zone. Egypt regains control of foreign relations, subject to her not making treaties contrary to British policy, and will have the right to maintain diplomatic representatives abroad. Capitulations will be abolished."

Other features of the agreement, as outlined, include a guarantee by Great Britain of Egypt's integrity against outside aggression. Advisers in different Ministries will be discontinued, but British officials will be appointed to take over and carry out the operation of the Public Debt Commission and look after legislation regarding foreigners. All British officials who may be retained in the Egyptian service, or appointed in future, will be responsible to Egyptian heads of departments. For the present it is said, Egyptian foreign diplomatic agents probably will be confined to countries where Egypt has commercial interests, and British representatives will act elsewhere for her.

WOULD AFFECT WORLD

If these terms hold, they may readily be put down as marking a new policy of the greatest importance not only for the British Empire but for a world growing rapidly smaller and with each member of the family of nations taking an increasingly personal interest in the affairs of all the others.

This unexpected denouement of nearly forty years of British control in Egypt follows hard upon rapid and violent action in that land since the end of the war. It is a development in which President Wilson's magic compound word "self-determination" has had a considerable share. For the armistice was not two days old when a committee of Egyptian Nationalists waited upon the British High Commissioner for Egypt in Cairo, and pointing to that particular one of the Fourteen Points, asked the High Commissioner, to be good enough to withdraw himself and the British troops from Egypt. That representative of the might of Great Britain, Sir Reginald Wingate, was obliged to reply that he had no knowledge of the views of his Majesty's Government on the future policy in Egypt, and in the meantime he would stay. The head of that Egyptian delegation was Zaghlul Pasha, who now appears at the head of the Egyptians in London who have come to such satisfactory terms, to themselves, with the Milner mission.

The Egyptian rebellion, the worst in the history of the British occupation of Egypt, started soon afterward. Zaghlul and his friends began to spread a fiery gospel of "complete independence." The British Government, going on the theory that Egypt could wait upon other problems of the peace arrangements, let the agitation go on unchecked. The mistake was made of arresting Zaghlul and three other Pashas on March 1, 1919, and deporting them to Malta. The answer of the Egyptians to this treatment of their popular leaders was an outbreak of great violence all over the country. The full story of the outrages was not allowed to come out at that time, and only gradually was it learned that furious mobs of natives, frequently led by members of the better classes, destroyed railways stations and private establishments of foreigners and those thought to be friendly to the British interests. For a time Cairo was competely cut off. British officers were struck down in the streets and a small party of unarmed officers and soldiers was hacked to pieces by a mob on a train.

ENGLAND SURPRISED

This terrible outburst of Egyptian violence came as a surprise to officials in England. Wingate was in London when the trouble became serious, and the British Government's answer to the ferocious challenge of British rule in Egypt was to send Lord Allenby, the conqueror of the Turks, post haste to Cairo from Paris, with the rank of Special High Commissioner, endowed with full power to restore order in the protectorate.

By the time Allenby arrived the British troops had succeeded in putting a stop to the worst disorders. Allenby brought further peace to the situation by ordering the release of Zaghlul and the three Pashas from Malta, and allowed an Egyptian delegation to proceed to Europe.

With this much gained, the growing Nationalist movement, with its unchanging cry of "full independence," began to promote a chain of strikes throughout the country, which had been particularly free from that sort of disturbance. Not only the workmen, but the professional men, and even the pupils in the schools, went out on strike, all demanding with one voice that the protectorate be abolished. The Government departments were affected, and all work was held up for three weeks. The long suffering Premier, Rushdi Pasha, finally threw up his hands and resigned; together with his Cabinet.

Martial law was Allenby's only alternative, while for a month he looked around for an Egyptian willing to undertake the unwelcome post of Premier.

FRESH DISCONTENT

In the meantime Zaghlul and his Pashas were in Paris besieging the Peace Conference with appeals to be heard and at the same time directing the efforts of the Party of Independence in its ceaseless work of arousing the people of Egypt for "full independence." Zaghlul got nowhere with the peacemakers at Paris, and the formation of the Milner mission in May, 1919 to draw up a new plan of government for Egypt only added fuel to the flames of Egyptian discontent. The word was passed along that, as the Milner mission was to act on the assumption that Egypt was to remain a British protectorate, it was the duty of all loyal Egyptians to boycott it. Allenby's statement of a British policy in November that gave indefinite promises of autonomy was no more successful in allaying the popular unrest.

New strikes and acts of violence began. Yusuf Pasha Wahba, a Copt official who had held many Cabinet offices, took over the office of Premier with the real duty of carrying out the instructions of the British commander. Yusuf and three of his Cabinet colleagues were bombed in the streets of Cairo, but escaped injury. The new Cabinet as well as the Sultan were helpless against the storm of anger that had been diligently fostered by the able Zaghlul and his fellows. The Government bureaus went on working of their own momentum, but the only laws carried out were those to which the military devoted itself.

This was the situation which met the gaze of Lord Milner and his colleagues when they reached Egypt to make their study of the situation. They were boycotted right and left, and delegations they asked to appear before them coldly refused. In last March the British mission turned homeward, to be followed by the faithful Zaghlul and his group. In London negotiations were carried on with greater success, until today, whatever the exact terms, it appears that an agreement has been arrived at that will be accepted by the leaders of the Party of Independence, which now represents nearly the whole of the native population.

The struggle in Egypt for an independent government is a war reaction in more ways than one. The British decree of Dec. 18, 1914, formally cut the theoretical tie that bound Egypt to the Ottoman Empire. From the "veiled protectorate", which had lasted since 1882 the veil was suddenly torn away. The reaction of the Egyptians to the cold fact of being subject to the British crown offers in itself a proof of the value of a fiction in matters of government. Furthermore, the war had brought great wealth to Egypt, particularly to the great landowners like Zaghlul, and funds to carry on a great political movement were readily available. Added to this was the great emphasis put all through the war, not only by President Wilson, but by the British statesmen themselves, on the rights on small nations to "self-determination" and the acceptance by all the belligerents of the Fourteen Points.

The seeds of the Nationalistic propaganda found fertile soil. The people of Egypt, while not homogeneous, being dwellers at a crossroads of the world, have the common bond of religion. Out of a population in 1917 of 12,750,000 there were 11,658,000 Moslems. The Copts, descendants of the ancient Egyptians and Orthodox (Jacobite) Christians, are small in number in comparison—only 855,000—while the Christians, Jews and others make up 225,000 more. While dealing with statistics of modern Egypt it might be pointed out that the hope of a successful independent country is not brightened by the figures for illiteracy. In 1917 only 120 males and 18 females out of every 1,000 could read and write—a condition for which the friends of the Nationalist movement do not hesitate to blame the British administration.

It is with this large population, settled in the fertile valley of the old Nile, that the British have carried out, so the world thought, one of their most successful achievements in governing. What their problem was in the early nineties—it has since been much simplified by the Anglo-French treaty of 1904 and by the working of the protectorate—has been picturesquely stated by Lord Milner, the energetic empire builder, who now appears in the role of liberator of a part of the empire. In his book, "England in Egypt," which has been successively reprinted from 1892 to 1909, he writes:

"Imagine a people the most docile and good tempered in the world in the grip of a religion the most intolerent and fanatical. Imagine this people and this faith, congenial in nothing but their conservatism, flung into the maelstrom of European restlessness and innovation. Imagine a country full of turbulent foreigners whom its police cannot arrest except flagrante delicto, and whom its courts cannot try except for the most insigificant offenses. Imagine the Government of this country unable to legislate for these foreigners without the consent of a dozen distant powers, most of them indifferent and some ill-disposed. Imagine it carrying on its principal business in a foreign tongue which yet is not the tongue of the predominant foreign race. Imagine it struggling to meet the clamorous growing needs of today with a budget rigorously fixed according to the requirements of the day before yesterday. Imagine the decrees of this Government liable to be set at naught by courts of its own creation. Imagine its policy really inspired and directed by the envoy of a foreign State who in theory, is only one—and not even the doyen—of a large number of such envoys and the chief administrative power really wielded by a man who in theory is a mere 'adviser without executive functions.' Yes, imagine all these things and then realise that they are not a 'Mikado' like invention of comic opera, no nightmare of some constitutional theorist with a disordered brain, but prosaic, solid fact—an unvarnished picture of the political Egypt of today (1892)."

And this is the strange machine that the British official sent out to Egypt made to run. Not only that, but even the enemies of British rule in Egypt do not deny the tremendous material benefits that British rule have brought to Egypt. They merely deny that material benefits are sufficient excuse for one people governing another. For the benefits are as plain as the Assouan Dam itself, that great engineering work which doubled the amount of lifegiving water for the plains of Egypt. The British found Egypt a bankrupt nation—it was her bankruptcy that first brought England and France to take a hand in her affairs. Today, having come through a maze of financial complications, the country pays her way with a surplus, and the fellaheen, whom the British found the most burdened with taxes of any miserable people in the world, have seen one after another of the burdens lifted. Nearly all that is the work of Lord Cromer, whose administrative work in Egypt covers twenty-four years.

It was this bankrupt state of the old Khedive Ismail that gave Disraeli his chance to turn one of the cleverest strokes of his career of cleverness when he bought the Khedive's shares in the new Suez Canal for a price a little under £4,000,000. Trouble over foreign bonds brought a British and French controller to the scene to supervise the finances of the country, as similar trouble took an American official to Santo Domingo a few years ago. The dual control of France and England ended with the violent revolution of 1882, when the fanatical "Arabi, the Egyptian," began massacring Christians and succeeded in driving the Khedive from his capital. England, with Gladstone at the head of the Government, hesitated long to take the plunge into the Egyptian

This Creamy Gruyere-Cheese is prepared from the richest unskimmed milk, from Swiss high-pastures under the most hygienic conditions, and is warranted pure. Being packed without crust, it is more economical than any crusted cheese, every particle being eatable. The manufacturers of the "BOUQUET des ALPES" Brand who are also the inventors of this kind of Swiss Cheese, succeeded in packing Gruyere-Cheese into small tins, and by their special process are not only able to secure a perfect preservation but also to retain the delicate flavour of the finest Gruyere-Cheese.

Paris Unable To Get Enough Police; Crime Grows

Because Frenchmen refuse to become policemen, owing to the better opportunities of civilian life, the French prefect of police announces that he is unable to swear in the extra men needed to stop the extraordinary crime wave which has recently engulfed the capital.

No less than 2,000 policemen are urgently needed if the city of Paris is to be properly protected, said the prefect.

Meanwhile crimes have become increasingly numerous and violent. Thousands of Apaches, who, during the war, were used to clean up the trenches, and who have now been demobilised, are terrorising Paris at night, and the danger is aggravated by the fact that brilliant street illumination is impossible owing to the shortage of coal.

Automobile holdups are so numerous that even taxi drivers have announced that, permit or no permit, they intend to carry side arms. Private automobilists are warned from stopping on lonely byways at the request of anyone, even if they think their accoster in trouble.

Cyclists have been known to race alongside autos, swing on the dashboard and hold up the occupants.

Murders are more frequent than even in the days of the Bonnet Rouge. At present no less than seventeen murder mysteries are puzzling the police. Among them is the famous Bessarabo case. Madame Bessarabo, daughter of a Mexican general, shot her husband, and putting the body in a trunk, shipped it to Nancy, where it was discovered after inquiries at Paris.

Madame Bessarabo has confessed to the murder and says that she was forced to commit the crime through jealousy of her husband's love affairs with other women. She declares her daughter to be innocent of knowledge of the crime, but the daughter is still held as a accomplice.

A few weeks ago a body was found in the Bois du Boulogne. It turned out to have been placed there by apaches who were accomplices of the murdered man who had been shot by one of their victims.

No clue has been found to the mystery of two girls' bodies, bearing marks of violence, who were recently found in the Seine. A woman proprietor of an "American bar" has been arrested charged with the killing of her lover.

The situation is so aggravated that practically everyone with business at night in Paris goes armed.

The Cruelty And Tragedy Of Big Cities Depicted

Engaged In Game Of Childish Rivalry Which Has Pathetic Effect On The Growing Generation, Says Writer

BY DR. WM. A. McKEEVER

(Professor in the University of Kansas and a well-known Educator)

We have just now completed another Government census and, in some respects, the big cities are engaged in a game of childish rivalry and envy as to which is ahead of the other in population. But underneath all this trivial competition I see one of the greatest tragedies of modern times—the pinching, cramping and semi-starving of the vast lower stratum of the population. And the situation becomes absolutely pathetic whenever we test it out as to its cruel effects on the growing generation.

SEEKS DECENTRALISATION

By the time of the census of 1930 I want to see the big cities vieing with one another in an effort toward intelligent decentralisation—the percentage of families transferred from crowded and suffocating situation to a wholesome life in the open country; the approximate number of growing children saved and made happy by means of their transference to places of better advantage for all-round development, intimate self-reliance and independence of thought and action.

During the past two weeks I have seen from the car window millions upon millions of acres of idle lands in the west and northwest, with a soil rich with the deposits of the ages and wanting only a supply of water to make it literally burst out with enough food to supply the tables of a continent. A mere ten-acre tract of this land, intensively cultivated, would permanently feed and fatten a family of five. And yet it lies here waiting for generations for the wicked, thoughtless cities to forsake their god of greed and their consequent despoliation of the helpless underclass children and to look intelligently unto these primitive open plains from which might come the very blessings of eternity.

And so, I urge that every big city throughout this great country at once set itself to the mighty purpose of redistribution of the dependent elements of its population to places of potential well-being and advantage.

CHANGE OF PLAN ADVOCATED

Too long the typical Chamber of Commerce has acted as a continuous boosters' club for massing the people into the cities with the false and cruel assumption that increase in population is of itself an evidence of credit and of improvement of the general well-being. Every city should proceed as once to lay out on a large scale its plans for colonisation of its excess population upon the soil and in the open places.

With a tenth of the money wasted in wrestling with the human want, crime and anguish growing out of its over-congestion, the typical big city of America could secure a million acres of rich desert land, could transform the same into a garden through irrigation, and could bless the world with a new civilisation by means of the gradual and systematic transference of its surplus families to this land of promise.

PLEA FOR CHILDREN

I am writing here a plea for the millions of ill-faring little children now being counted among the proud (?) population lists of our cities. I am pleading for the other millions of innocent babes soon to follow these and to come into a world which to them can at best become only a den of suppression and iniquity. Sometime I hope and pray an accusing angel will appear in startling presence and behold, as it were, at one glance the 300,000 little ones whom we annually destroy through our indifferent cruelty of centralisation—some time. I hope, an angel of compassion will point accusingly to our wicked cities, crying, "Monster, you have slain all of these."

Egypt's Place In The Sun

tangle. She asked France and other nations to join her in restoring order to the torn country. They refused, and it was Sir Garnet Wolseley alone who led the assault of a small British army on the rebels at Tel-el-Kebir and routed them. The military victory was easily won, but it left the country, with a helpless Government, on the hands of the British.

The British policy in Egypt was laid down in a famous despatch of Lord Granville to all the powers on Jan. 3, 1883. "Although for the present," says the document, "a British force remains in Egypt for the preservation of public transquility, her Majesty's Government are desirous of withdrawing it as soon as the state of the country and the organisation of proper means of maintenance of the Khedive's authority will admit of it. In the meantime the position in which her Majesty's Government are placed toward his Highness imposes upon them the duty of giving advice with the object of securing that the order of thing to be established shall be of a satisfactory character and possess the elements of stability and progress."

In a private message to the Adviser, Granville spoke more clearly and stated that it was necessary that those Ministers who were unwilling to follow the advice given them should cease to hold office. And the "advice," from that time on, was always fortified by a few thousand troops.

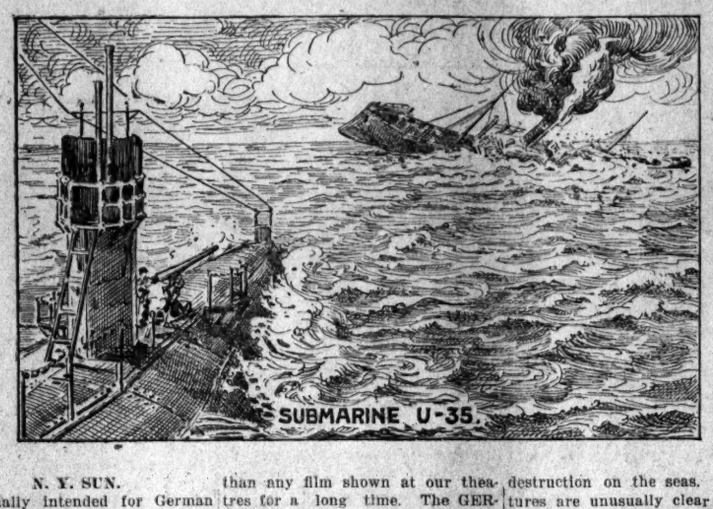
LOOK! Read what the New York newspapers said about the

"German Submarine U-35"



N. Y. SUN.

Originally intended for German eyes only, the startling submarine films at the big Capitol Theatre are the most thrilling and sensational pictures New York has seen for a very long time. The GERMAN SUBMARINE U-35 is shown in action on the seas and many vessels are destroyed in front of your very eyes, it is certainly a powerful and remarkable picture.

N. Y. TIMES.

The Capitol Theatre has a thrilling picture of actual sea warfare that has created more comment than any film shown at our theatres for a long time. The GERMAN SUBMARINE U-35 scenes are wonderful in every sense of the word.

N. Y. GLOBE.

Nothing more remarkable has ever been shown here in New York than the pictures of the German submarine warfare now at the Capitol Theatre. The "Submarine U-35" pictures certainly stand out as a feature worthy of special consideration. It is a record of the exploits of a famous underseas raider as it continued its work of destruction on the seas. The pictures are unusually clear and are certainly thrilling and impressive.

N. Y. TELEGRAM.

The most interesting part of the Capitol Theatre programme this week is the remarkable pictures of the exploits of the GERMAN SUBMARINE U-35. These pictures taken from the deck of the underseas craft show in an intensely thrilling manner the actual sinking of at least seven merchant vessels on the high seas by the famous raider.
